Through education, science, conservation, community service, the arts, and sustainable garden management, the Garden serves nearly 30,000 visitors each year with mission-driven programs for children, youth, families, and adults in the capital of one of the nation's most biodiverse states.

From hands-on youth activities and family programs to adult workshops and lectures on gardening, design, plant ID, pollinators, and ethnobotany, the Garden offers meaningful ways to connect with nature year-round.
